Purpose

For NDIS providers who require verification, this document outlines the evidence that auditors must receive in order to assess conformity with the verification module of the NDIS Practice Standards.

Background

Verification is for all providers (excluding government entities) delivering lower risk, lower complexity supports and services only. When registering through verification, NDIS providers supply documentation against the four standards and each outcome within the verification module of the NDIS Practice Standards. The following guidance outlines the required documentation.

The documentation relates to their identity, professional qualifications, experience, ongoing professional development, criminal and character checks, insurances and completion of the NDIS mandatory worker orientation program. Evidence of systems and processes to manage human resources, work health and safety, incidents and complaints is also required, proportionate to the size of the organisation.

These documents are checked through a desktop audit undertaken by an approved quality auditor. Approved quality auditors are required to make sure that the evidence provided is proportionate to the risk and complexity of the supports and services delivered, and the size and scale of the organisation. What this means is that a smaller provider with fewer workers and participants is not expected to present the same evidence as a national provider with a large workforce and many participants. More information about proportionality is available on the NDIS Commission website.

Rationale

The NDIS Practice Standards create an important benchmark for providers to assess their performance, and to demonstrate how they provide high quality and safe supports and services to NDIS participants. To comply with the verification module of the NDIS Practice Standards, providers must show evidence of:

- Relevant qualifications, expertise and experience
- Incident management processes/policies
- Complaints management processes/policies
- Risk management processes/policies

These guidelines set out the requirements that each profession must meet during the verification process.

Generally speaking, providers who register for these registration groups either:

1) deliver relatively lower risk supports and services, and/or

2) are already subject to professional regulation as a requirement of doing business

This includes regulation through the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA) and through the other professional bodies that provide regulatory oversight of the professions included within these guidelines.

This existing regulation includes setting of standards and the ongoing monitoring of the individual's competency to practice their profession, including through continuing professional development.

Because of the existing obligations of these professional bodies, and the lower risk, lower complexity support types delivered under the registration groups in scope of verification, NDIS providers have a streamlined audit process requiring a desktop review of the documentary evidence outlined in these guidelines.

As the NDIS market develops, the NDIS Commission will continue to monitor the effectiveness of these profession-specific regulatory frameworks to meet the NDIS Commission's requirements in relation to safe, quality services for NDIS participants.

Worker Screening

Who needs to be screened?

Registered NDIS providers in all states and territories (except for Western Australia) have responsibilities and obligations in relation to screening their workers under the NDIS Commission. These are set out in the NDIS (Practice Standards – Worker Screening) Rules 2018.

NDIS providers undergoing verification are responsible for assessing whether a worker may be required to undergo worker screening.

A person employed or otherwise engaged by a registered NDIS provider will require worker screening if:

- They are in a role for which the normal duties are likely to require more than incidental contact with people with disability (as defined in s6 of the NDIS Rules (Practice Standards – Worker Screening) Rules 2018)
- They are in a role for which the normal duties include the direct delivery of specified supports or specified services to a person with disability
- They are Key Personnel. "Key Personnel" means individuals who hold key executive, management or operational positions in an organisation, such as directors, managers, board members, chief executive officer or chairperson. You must disclose the requested information for all key personnel.
